WOOD FLOORING

ITLAS PAVIMENTI IN LEGNO

Cordignano, Veneto, Italy

Patrizio Dei Tos, in partnership with his father Lino, purchased the Zarpellon sawmill at Cordignano in 1988. The business was to concentrate its activities on producing pre-finished wood flooring, which was an innovative product in the eighties and nineties. Patrizio sought to solve many problems of wood flooring, including expansion and contraction issues and inefficient onsite finishing. He created a wide, catalogued variety of reliable colors and finishes to choose from by re-engineering the product's structure and finish all while maintaining a love for a natural product and artisanal craftsmanship. He revolutionized wood flooring by bringing a vastly superior product to the market with a size, pattern, and finish variety and stability that had never before been achieved. Itlas has maintained its love of craftsmanship and prides itself on being able to produce quantities for large projects as well as small quantities of complicated patterns and intricate handcarved details such as medallions and custom wood artwork, using time honored traditions combined with modern technology and innovation.

MINGARDO

Monselice, Veneto, Italy

Mingardo Ilario founded Mingardo Blacksmith Workshop in 1970, after over twenty years of experience in the metal processing field. The production was initially focused on simple blacksmith work for the construction industry. With perfection over time, production focused on more refined items, enabling the company to collaborate with internationally renowned companies and architects: from the first collaborations with architect Carlo Scarpa to the more recent commissions for Museo del Novecento in Milan, Parco della Musica in Florence, and Teatro Petruzzelli in Bari. In 2013, at only 25, Ilario's son Daniele launched his own brand, Mingardo, in order to combine his passion for craftsmanship with his love for design. Daniele made his debut as an independent manufacturer of hand-made and numbered design objects during the Milan Design Week. The decision to create his own brand as a manufacturer comes from the desire to overcome the business model of traditional craft by developing an innovative business project able to transfer artisanal skills to contemporary metal objects designed by emerging and established designers.
